Governor,

Sounds like today was, well, a challenge. I and others let you down, and I apologize. Just got off the phone with Meg, we were trying to come up with a methodology to ensure you are not left unprepared again. An interesting (and maddening) dynamic, with too many cooks in the kitchen, but they're all in the backyard when you need one. We can fix that.

If it is any consolation, it went great in Kenai -- rave support for our process and TC Alaska at a jam-packed Chamber and on KSRM. I think the others experienced similar results elsewhere at te big events.

Two points:

First, as to your Forbes interview on Thursday, Meg and I will ensure your have notes in hand tomorrow, as well as an assistsnt to be with you during the interview. Is there somebody specific you request? We can turn whoever you need loose from the Forum. I strongly recommend Marty.

Second, re your Forum speech tomorrow, Meg said that Kris had passed along that you are not interested in "reading another book." I agree. You've been there done that re the minutiae of the findings. I would suggest something very simple, basically just an introduction, along these lines:

Hi fellow vets and wives and moms,

Happy Memorial day to you all and a short thought for the ones who are not with us. I can't believe how long my vet pal address list is! Good folks all.

All is well with the Terry Luther family here in beautiful Alaska. It is a 65 degree day here with sunshine and blue sky. A CAVU day for sure in pilot language.

I felt a nostalgic thought this morning as I sent son Shaun off to fight wildfires.He's a State of Alaska Type 2 Initial Attack Team member and loves it immensely. As he went out the door with nomex, backpack and all (50# backpack) I thanked God he wasn't also carrying a M-16 and had a USMC/US Army something on his nomex shirt. I can't reconcile myself to him being at risk as I was, and many of you were, for so many years. A dad's failing I guess. He's a very extraordinary young man bound for Cal Poly to be an Aerospace Engineer in September.

My God! I'll be alone with Cindy!!!!

My prayers are with all of you. A from the heart thanks for what you've done for America.

Our best,

Terry, Cindy and Shaun

Subject: AGIA discussion on Radio Kenai (KSRM) 9-10 am on 5-27-2008

Dear Ms. Rutherford,

You and I had a discussion yesterday about where physically the petro-chemicals would be scrubbed out of the gas line going to Alberta. The end result is (as you stated) that would be accomplished in Alberta and we would receive our rightful share probably 1/8th or 12-1/2% as a guess. Then you went on to state if the gas went to Asia (Pacific Rim) that they wanted "hot" gas and the only petro-chemical we could scrub out is I believe propane?

I thought the whole thrust of the State was to provide "value added" jobs for all Alaskans? How can this be accomplished when the all of the scrubbing is going to be done in Alberta? We have rail, water shipping ports galore in Alaska. We have to do the petro-chemical extraction strictly within Alaska and charge the oil companies 87-1/2 % of our cost for this service!

The "hot" gas issue to Asia doesn't meet the acid test in my opinion. In Nikiski we already strip out the petro-chemicals and ship the resulting dry gas to Japan. We have done this for many years.

I feel that Trans-Canada has earned the right to be the prime pipeline contractor for whatever project happens within the State of Alaska but with the "caveat" of a total Alaska workforce hire, period. Trans Canada is experienced the Canadian Arctic.

It seems like you have a preconceived agenda for Alberta and that's not fair to all Alaskans. You stated Asia wanted "hot" gas as referenced supra. I suspect the meetings you and your team are holding statewide are more "dog and pony shows" strictly for Alberta!

The legislature I hope will look closely at all options instead of strictly focusing on Alberta.

I am fast getting the impression that the petro-chemicals are more valuable than the "dry" gas. You in my opinion may have "tunnel vision" in-so-far as (what is "just" for all working Alaskans) by strictly focusing on Alberta for petro-chemical extraction! Start looking at the entire forest instead of the first layer of trees!

Sharon,

Apropos of the story about Rick Steiner and his request for info about the state's analysis of the federal science behind the polsr bear listing - I would like to see what the state's scientists said about it. If the governor is choosing not to release what the scientists said, I'd like to know why. Science is best done out in the open, where the work can be critiqued, no? This seems like a case where any "deliberative process" exemption should be waived in the public interest, so the public can see the science provided by the state's scientists, before the science arrived in the hands of politicians.

An open and transparent administrstion would release the scientists' analysis unfiltered, wouldn't it? (yes, that was an editorial statement - in case you're wondering where this is likely headed....)

Shoot- I was thinking June was the month that became available for th KA. (I must have been wishing instead of listening to you!).

The bbq sounds great. Todd and I need to find available seats then to get down there. We can't travel the day before b/c Monday will be an interview day in Anchorage (and bill signing). If there are no tuesday flts then we'll do the bbq the next day.

I trust you two will notify Erika re: her role in organizing the event.

I've been waiting to hear on the AGIA sched also so I can know if I'm coming or going down there. We'll be doing bill signings in different areas in june- probably following the path of lawmakers who plan to take AGIA on the road, as they've promised to do.

I am not sure what your plan is for the beginning of the session in terms of being in Juneau. I would recommend Privileged or Personal Material Redacted I know Kelly was going to talk with you about your schedule.

I also wanted to suggest that you invite Legislators to a reception at the house for a catered BBQ of sorts, Tuesday night (hope the weather is still good) just to welcome them back etc. I talked to Kelly this morning and she too thought that might be a good idea.

I asked for a Legislative plan for AGIA and have not seen one yet. I requested that Pat and Tom put together an agenda, calendar, and a current vote count as they see it. I have not seen anything from them yet. I know they were busy with the AGIA presentation this week but Pat and Joe thought they could have something to me today.

As for the Public Safety plane, (King Air) I indicated to you last week that Walt said the plane would be available to you July 1st. I will work with Kris and Janice to see if we can map out a rural community tour for you during July and August. I will also have a better idea on charter plane costs to see if that will be a viable alternative for consideration for the month of June or to supplement your July and August travel.

I will be in Anchorage tomorrow and Friday.

Mike

Oh my gosh that's so cool Janice- thanks so much for taking the time to share that w/me. There was something unique about that little, quick, informal event yesterday - I just felt like such "mom" all of a sudden to those young men -they were so sweet and innocent and patriotic! Pray for their safety, please.

And thanks to Kate for her awesome speech she wrote - and to all of you for putting it all together yesterday. It ended up being an event that reminded me how important it is for me to prioritize time so we can give it to those we truly are honored to serve. Thanks, all!

Governor – I wanted to let you know that I received a call approximately 20 minutes after you had left Elmendorf (Marines Deployment) yesterday. The Major called to just once again thank us all for putting this together on such short notice. The Major stated that once you had given your remarks and interacted with the Marines and Families he knew that those being deployed were now okay with going. It was like a peace had settled over them. It is so great to receive these kinds of calls and I wanted to make sure this was conveyed to you. Janice

Subject: Talking points - polar bears

Talking Points - Polar Bears

U.S. Interior Secretary Dirk Kempthorne has decided to list the polar bear as threatened under the Endangered Species Act.

The State of Alaska intends to sue. WHY?

I'm not a scientist, so I won't be addressing the science, per se. But, in general, our reasoning is:

- The evidence is not there to support this listing.

- Polar bear populations, right now, have increased dramatically over the last 30 years. That has happened because the Marine Mammal Protection Act has worked. It's done its job.

- Listing the polar bear under the Endangered Species Act is not going to provide any ADDITIONAL protection for these magnificent animals.

- This listing is based on speculation - on computer models forecasting the effects of global warming on the polar bear far into the future.

- The bottom line is, the Endangered Species Act is not the right tool to address impacts to a species from climate change.

- Now, the Secretary did recognize that oil and gas activities are already regulated under the Marine Mammal Protection Act to prevent impacts to the polar bear and do not pose a threat to the polar bear - so there is an exemption there, and we appreciate that, BUT ...

- As Governor of Alaska, my priority is to ensure that in all our decision making, we must balance the need to preserve and protect our incredible wildlife with careful and responsible development of Alaska's vast natural resources. Alaska is a resource-rich state, and resource development fuels our state's economy. And that means jobs for our people, a strong, healthy economy now and for the future, too. For our children and our grandchildren. If the environmentalists have their way and oil and gas development are shut down on Alaska's North Slope, the economic impact to our state would be catastrophic. So there's a lot at stake. And not only just for Alaska, but for America, as we are facing record-high fuel prices.

- While the State of Alaska is challenging this listing, we remain committed to ensuring that Alaska's polar bears are conserved. We will continue to monitor Alaska's polar bear populations and their behaviors in relation to changing sea ice conditions.

- As soon as Secretary Kempthorne issued his decision to list the Polar Bear as Threatened, the Governor directed the Department of Law to review the decision.

- While we appreciate the secretary's recognition that oil and gas activities are already regulated under the Marine Mammal Protection Act to prevent impacts to the polar bear, and do not pose a threat to the polar bear, we believe that the decision to list was fundamentally a bad decision.

- DOL is currently working on a draft civil complaint challenging the listing determination under the Administrative Procedure Act (APA).

DOL is continuing to monitor the ongoing litigation (CBD case) related to the polar bear in the Northern District of California, and will consider intervention in that lawsuit if it becomes clear that the court in that case intends to address substantive rather than just procedural issues.

We believe that:

- the secretary erred in his unprecedented listing of a currently healthy population based on uncertain modeling of future climate change and even more uncertain speculation regarding impacts of that change.

- the secretary's decision to list a currently healthy species was not based solely on the best available scientific and commercial information as required by the ESA

- The agency violated the ESA by failing to base its decision "solely on the basis of the best scientific and commercial data available

Subject: SB 202 Information

NOTE: this letter will NOT be public until tomorrow.

Attached is the letter Governor Palin signed today allowing SB 202 become law without signature. As I explained it to the sponsor's staff (George in Sen. Wielechowski's office), it provided a way for the Governor to make a statement and agree with the sponsor of the bill and still expand on additional concerns in the areas of privacy, the federal government forcing state's action and Alaskan's ability to oversee its own identification system.

It is important to say the Governor agrees with Sen Wielechowski approach with SB 202; however the overall issue of REAL ID is still unresolved.

In my opinion, this should be shared in a positive manner -- Alaskans are concerned about personal privacy and the Governor's agrees.

Let me know if you have any questions. Thanks so much.

Kelly

All,

Governor Palin has been invited to be on Fox News and CNN's Glenn Beck show tomorrow to talk about the polar bear listing. The Governor wanted me to check with all of you to get your feedback on whether she should do the interviews. Also, the Anchorage Daily News editorial board is inquiring about the state's analysis of the science behind the listing - see below.

Any feedback you can provide would be appreciated.

Thanks

Sharon,

Apropos of the story about Rick Steiner and his request for info about the state's analysis of the federal science behind the polar bear listing - I would like to see what the state's scientists said about it. If the governor is choosing not to release what the scientists said, I'd like to know why. Science is best done out in the open, where the work can be critiqued, no? This seems like a case where any "deliberative process" exemption should be waived in the public interest, so the public can see the science provided by the state's scientists, before the science arrived in the hands of politicians.

An open and transparent administration would release the scientists' analysis unfiltered, wouldn't it? (yes, that was an editorial statement - in case you're wondering where this is likely headed....)

Needless to say I am deeply disappointed. I hope all of us will contact the governors office letting her know that you too are disappointed by this action. Despite the setback we move forward. For the last 30 years it has broken my heart whenever there was a drowning in this area and that will continue as I know if folks get water safety training and the opportunity to learn how to swim the number of deaths by drowning will decrease and I wonder why this is so difficult to see. I have cc'd this to Lyman, Mary & Governor Palin.

Dear Governor Pallin,

I'm writing to ask you to approve funding for the Kincaid Park Project in the Capital Budget.

This is an investment that fits squarely under the government's obligation to promote the general welfare. With governments increasingly playing roles in funding treatment of and dealing with mental and physical health problems that are in part attributable to insufficient activity, a wise government will invest in developing healthy active recreational venues for its citizens. Kincaid is an investment that will pay tremendous public health dividends for the community. And the benefits extend beyond the wholly sufficient objective of promoting public health. A world class nordic ski facility stands to bring much attention and visitors to Anchorage in coming years, which will benefit the local economy.

K- pls draft a letter-to-editor (225 words max) summarizing budget. Unless someone's done the op-ed already...

We really need to message this right (hopefully it's not too late to do so) re: "cuts" in so many cases were not CUTS to exisiting levels of operating funds, they were reductions in the increased requests by lawmakers.

Also, the letter needs to explain our desire for balance along with the other principles we used to prioritize.

Also to remind pers/trs relief, increased muni shares, huge savings. Alll those things were lost in mainstream media coverage of our budget.

A sentence in there must explain we have just allocated the largest amount of money, ever in state's history, for education (and still it's bickered about that it's not enough, so says a mayor or official or two)!

dear governor and others. I just finished a telephone interview with Newsweek. I had received the referal from my staff from Sharon leighow. I tried to stayclose to talking points from Steve Daugherty and said we we like polar bears and favor reasonable development. We acted to avoid having a bad decision become worse. Talis.

All,

Governor Palin has been invited to be on Fox News and CNN's Glenn Beck show tomorrow to talk about the polar bear listing. The Governor wanted me to check with all of you to get your feedback on whether she should do the interviews. Also, the Anchorage Daily News editorial board is inquiring about the state's analysis of the science behind the listing - see below.

Any feedback you can provide would be appreciated.

Thanks

Sharon,

Apropos of the story about Rick Steiner and his request for info about the state's analysis of the federal science behind the polar bear listing - I would like to see what the state's scientists said about it. If the governor is choosing not to release what the scientists said, I'd like to know why. Science is best done out in the open, where the work can be critiqued, no? This seems like a case where any "deliberative process" exemption should be waived in the public interest, so the public can see the science provided by the state's scientists, before the science arrived in the hands of politicians.

An open and transparent administration would release the scientists' analysis unfiltered, wouldn't it? (yes, that was an editorial statement - in case you're wondering where this is likely headed....)

Governor - I wanted to let you know that I received a call approximately 20 minutes after you had left Elmendorf (Marines Deployment) yesterday. The Major called to just once again thank us all for putting this together on such short notice. The Major stated that once you had given your remarks and interacted with the Marines and Families he knew that those being deployed were now okay with going. It was like a peace had settled over them. It is so great to receive these kinds of calls and I wanted to make sure this was conveyed to you. Janice
